PREFACE

'Reed sceal mon secgan, Rune writan, Leod gesingan, Lofes gearnian, Dom areccan, Dæges onettan.' 'It is but the cloudes gathered about our owne judgement that makes us thinke all other ages wrapt up in mistes, and the great distance betwixt us that causes us to imagine men so farre off to be so little in respect of ourselves.'

§ 1.

N the year 1071 died Leofric, first Bishop of Exeter, sometime Chancellor of England, the friend and favourite of Edward the Confessor, a distinguished disciple of the Lotharingian schools. Contemporary accounts have come down to us describing the pomp which attended the bishop's installation; how, in the presence of the chieftains of the realm, supported by the king on his right and by the noble Eadgitha on his left, he ascended his episcopal throne in the ancient minster of St. Mary and St. Peter the Apostle. The minster, when it came into his possession, had been despoiled of its lands and of nigh all its ecclesiastical appurtenances; 'of twenty-six estates which the pious king Athelstane had conferred upon it scarce one remained.' During the twenty years of his rule, Leofric's energies and wealth were devoted to the restoration of its former fortunes, and when he died he left it more richly endowed than it had ever been before. But he bequeathed to his cathedral-church something besides a magnificent rent-roll, - something even more precious. When he took office, the library at Exeter was in a pitiable condition; he found there nothing but five worthless service-books; at his death it numbered no less than sixty volumes,-Bibles, servicebooks, homiletic literature, theological commentaries, and the chief classics of those days, to wit, the works of Statius, Prudentius, Prosper, and Boethius. Leofric's library at Exeter did not, it is true, number as many volumes as some of the rich Anglo-Saxon libraries of which we have record; it certainly did not rival Archdeacon Egbert's famous collection at York, that called forth Alcuin's enthusiastic praise:-

> 'Illic invenies veterum vestigia patrum, Quidquid habet pro se Latio Romanus in orbe, Græcia vel quidquid transmisit clara Latinis; Hebraicus vel quod populus bibit imbre superno;'

nevertheless, one item in the catalogue of Leofric's books places him in the first rank of our early bibliophiles, and has earned for him, or should earn for him, the undying gratitude of his countrymen. In the catalogue, which is extant, writ in choicest Anglo-Saxon, there is an entry which runs as follows:—

i.e. 'A great English book on all sorts of subjects wrought in verse." Happily, we have not to bewail the loss of the volume thus described. Exeter Cathedral still cherishes the possession of this most glorious relic of pre-Conquest literature. The 'Exeter Book,' the name by which it should be known to Englishmen all over the world, may well claim to be the noblest product of early Teutonic genius. True, it cannot boast of great beauty of workmanship,-it is not, like the 'Codex Argenteus,' written on purple vellum in letters of silver and gold; no wondrous miniatures adorn its pages, like the 'Book of Kells,' - 'Angles,' not 'Angels,' wrought it,-but its contents claim for it a higher consideration than even the supreme philological interest of the former and the artistic glories of the latter. It has preserved for us a whole library of national literature, that would otherwise have been irrevocably lost; it is in itself a 'bibliotheca' rather than a 'book.'

§ 2.

It is not my purpose on this occasion to dwell on the contents of the volume; a study of the 'Exeter Book' would practically amount to a survey of old English poetry through all its varied vicissitudes, harking back to the songs that glee-men sang before the legions of imperial Rome surrendered Britain to its fatal conflict with barbaric Teuton. Fierce and brutal as were these pirate-hordes towards their foes, yet their harps were attuned to tender strains as they sang their sailor-songs of the dear ones left behind:—

'To the Frisian wife comes a dear welcome-guest; the keel is at rest; his vessel is come; her husband is home; her own cherished lord she leads to the board; his wet weeds she wrings; dry garments she brings. Ah! happy is he, whom safe from the sea his true love awaits!'

But, for the most part, the Anglo-Saxons took to their poetry very sadly. The prevailing note of the old English lyric is elegiac; intense melancholy, harmonising with the gloom of Northern sea and sky, with the fatalism of their Pagan faith, is the one mood reflected in the subjective poems of the 'Exeter Book':—

'Ah! thou bright cup! Ah, thou mailed warrior!
Ah! the glory of my lord! Now has the time passed, darkened 'neath the veil of night, as if it ne'er had been.
Where once loved warriors trod, now stands a wall of wondrous height, worm-eaten, grim; the might of the spears, slaughter-loving weapons, has swept away the chiefs,—theirs was a glorious fate,—but storms lash the rocky slopes, and falling snowdrift binds the earth, and all the winter's terror, when the dark night falls with its black shadow, and summons from the north fierce storms, to the grievance of mankind. All the realm of earth is full of hardship, the world 'neath heaven is turned by fate's decree.' 1

This turn for melancholy is an abiding element in English poetry throughout its history; there can be little question that it is essentially an English characteristic, despite Matthew Arnold's oft-quoted dictum that it is altogether derived from Celtic source. But while the note of the old English lyric is elegiac, as far as its form is concerned it belongs to the epic,—the allabsorbing art-form of our oldest poetry. Epic dignity and distinction, not lyrical rapidity of movement, mark even the shortest of Anglo-Saxon songs.

And what better instrument for the grand epic style than the wondrous blank verse—the old alliterative line—of these ancient poets. Critics of Elizabethan literature delight to dwell on 'the mighty line' created by the greatest of Shakespeare's predecessors; but, ten centuries before Marlowe's genius impressed itself on the English drama, English poetry had already 'unlocked the secret of blank verse,' and had played upon 'its hundred stops.' The secret of Marlowe's great discovery lies in this, that he Teutonised the 'versi sciolti' imported from Italy, and unconsciously imparted thereto the flexibility and vigour that characterised the national metre used by the oldest of English poets, whose work has come down to us. The high seriousness and earnestness of old English poetry; its epic style, absorbing lyrical and even dramatic elements; its subjectivity and melancholy; its subtle power of thoroughly nationalising foreign materials; its rich vocabulary and phraseology; the wonder of its varying verse, expressive of every shade of human emotion; its artistic consciousness; its avoidance of anything approaching mediæval grotesqueness,—all these qualities distinguish the remarkable poem which holds the first place in the Codex Exoniensis. This poem, which is probably the oldest Christiad of modern Europe, is herewith introduced to English readers, its text carefully studied and interpreted.

§ 3.

The text is based on the editor's unpublished edition of the Exeter MS., in preparation for the Early English Text Society. The variations from the MS. will be found in 'Critical Notes' at the end of the volume.¹ The MS. has been followed minutely, not merely in the matter of spelling, but also as regards the divisions of the poem,—a matter of special importance hitherto neglected. Though there are no titles to the various passus, the scribe has clearly indicated the beginning of each by means of a long flourish of capital letters, distinguishing carefully the smaller sections from the main divisions. Thus, the MS. makes it certain that Passus III. begins with words 'Donne mid fere,' and does not include the previous section. External evidence corroborates this view. Appendix II. gives the source of Passus II.; it is obvious that the final section of the passus is directly due to the final section of the homily. It is strange that Dietrich, who first called attention to the unity of the poem, and to the chief source of its second division, should have missed this point.

In Appendix I. I have printed fifty-eight lines hitherto regarded as part of the present poem, but most assuredly, if the original scribe may be credited, the opening lines of the 'Legend of St. Guthlac'; there is absolutely no break in the Ms. between these lines and the passage usually printed as the first section of the latter poem. I make bold to suggest that the whole section is a prelude to 'St. Guthlac,' with motives derived from the concluding portion of the 'Christ.' Thorpe, the first editor of the Exeter Ms., is no doubt answerable for this error, which even the ingenuity of Dietrich and Grein did not detect.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Thorpe's Codex Exoniensis appeared just fifty years ago. Unfortunately, he failed to see the value of 'the first 106 pages' of his book (i.e. the portion containing the present poem); his comment ran as follows:—'Though interesting to the philologist, they possess little attraction for any other class of readers. The pieces they contain are, no doubt, translations from the Latin; but their subject is not of a nature to stimulate many to search after the originals, which, if discovered, would prove of little use in elucidating the

Appendix III. is a valuable contribution made by Professor Cook to the sources of the poem, and may be regarded as affording external evidence in favour of the theory propounded above concerning the limit of the third passus. It remains but to point out that unfortunately the first part of Passus I. is lost; to give to the epic the appearance of completeness a single word has been omitted; the capital letter at the beginning of the text has no MS. authority. The frontispiece has been added to the volume as a specimen of Anglo-Saxon art, illustrative of the subject of the second part of the poem; it belongs to the famous series of miniatures that adorn the Benedictional of St. Æthelwold.

obscurities, or correcting the errors of a version, in this and all similar cases yet known, too paraphrastic to admit of comparison.'

In 1853 Dietrich called attention to the unity of the poems, but as he had no opportunity of examining the Ms., he did not perceive the real state of affairs, though he and others might have inferred it from Wanley's description of the Ms. (v. page 280), where 'Passus' I., II., III., are styled 'Liber' I., II., III., though the connection of the 'Libri' was not noted. In 1857 Grein's Bibliothek included the 'Christ,' which was based on Thorpe's text. Grein accepted Dietrich's views on the subject of the poem, but printed it unnecessarily as one long poem, with twenty-two sections. In 1857 appeared the same scholar's 'Dichtungen der Angelsachsen stabreimend uebersebzt.' Little has been done for the interpretation of the poem since Grein's monumental work, though the need of a new edition has been long felt. It is a strange fact that after 1100 years and more the 'Christ' now appears for the first time as a separate volume. The translation which accompanies the text is the first attempt that has been made to interpret the poem as a piece of English literature.

Long and patient search has failed to discover the source of Passus I.; this failure is especially to be deplored as one would much wish to know from what original the poet evolved the earliest dramatic scene in English literature, (v. page 18.) What a contrast an Anglo-Saxon religious drama would have presented to the homely miracles and mysteries of later centuries! The original of the greater part of Passus I. must, I think, have been a Latin hymn-cycle, the 'Joseph and Mary' section being derived from an undiscovered hymn arranged for recital by half-choirs. The crude materials used for Passus II. and III., printed at the end of the volume, attest in a remarkable way the transforming power of the poet; the well-sustained simile that closes Passus II. owes its existence to the words in the last section of St. Gregory's Homily, 'Quamvis adhuc rerum perturbationibus animus fluctuet.' The passages in the Appendix form a valuable commentary to the greater part of the text.

§ 4.

The Exeter MS. was written some time in the tenth century, or early in the eleventh; the bulk of its contents is, however, at least two centuries older. Its dialect is West-Saxon, or 'Anglo-Saxon,' as it is generally called, but one is able to detect in a number of the poems the fossil remains of another and an older dialect. Minute philological criteria lead to the conclusion, supported strongly by other evidence, that the first of the poems preserved in the codex, and many more besides, are Saxon (i.e. Southern) transcriptions of Anglian (i.e. Northern) originals. Wessex merely preserved the poems, Northumbria produced them. Indeed at no time in its history has Wessex been productive of poetical work; from the days of Alfred onward its special strength lay in prose literature. Did not Chaucer recognise the fact when he made his parson exclaim:—

'Trusteth wel, I am a Sotherne man,
I cannot geste, rom, ram, ruf, by my letter,
And God wote, rime hold I but litel better,
And therefore if you list I wol not glose,
I wol you tell a litel tale in prose.'

It seems almost certain then that the 'Christ' is an Anglian poem, written before Northumbria ceased to be the great centre of poetical activity, i.e. before the beginning of the ninth century, and critics are at one in placing the 'floruit' of its poet during the second half of the eighth century. The poet in question has bequeathed to us his name by a strange device; by means of mystic runes Cynewulf worked a subtle spell whereby his authorship of this and of three other poems is incontestably established. In an 'Excursus on Cynewulf Runes,' at the end of the volume, I have considered the many questions at issue concerning this important point. It remains but to add that I am sceptical on the subject of the supposed charade-character of the so-called 'First Riddle.' Interesting attempts have been made to write the 'biography of the poet; it is not my purpose in this place to attempt a similar task, which would involve a discussion of the whole problem of Cynewulf's relation to the extant remains of Anglo-Saxon poetry. In conclusion, I would apply to our poet the commendation bestowed by an old historian on one of Cynewulf's masters and predecessors, whose fame rests solely on his Latin verse, though he too composed in the vernacular:—

'Omnium poetarum sui temporis facilé primus, tantæ eloquentiæ majestatis et cruditionis homo fuit, ut nunquam satis admirari possim unde illi in tam barbara ac rudi ætate facundia accreberit, usque adeo omnibus numeris tersa, elegans, et rotunda, bersus edidit cum antiquitate de palma contendentes.'

THOU art the wall-stone that the workers once rejected from the work. It well beseemeth thee, that thou shouldst be the head of this great hall, and shouldst unite, with fastening secure, the spacious walls of adamantine rock, that throughout earth all things with sight endowed may wonder evermore, O Prince of glory! Show now thy skill! reveal thy handiwork firm-set in sovran splendour! yea, leave anon the opposing walls erect! The work hath need now that the Craftsman and the King Himself should come, and should restore the house, which lieth waste beneath the roof. He formed the body erst, and the limbs of clay; now shall He, Lord of life, deliver from their foes this abject throng, these wretched ones from terror, as He oft did. O thou Ruler, and thou righteous King! Thou Keeper of the keys that open life! bless us with victory, with a bright career, denied unto another, if his work be worthless!'

Forsooth in very need we speak these words;
Him who created man we supplicate, that He elect not to declare in hate the doom of us who sad in prison here sit yearning for the sun's propitious course.
When the Lord of life revealeth light to us,
be He the guardian-angel of our souls,
and wreathe the feeble mind with radiant grace.
May He glorify us thus, His favoured ones,
when we must needs depart in abject plight unto this narrow land, bereft of home.

Verily he may say it, who speaketh truth, that when the race of man was all depraved, He came and rescued it. Young was the maiden, a damsel sinless, whom He chose as mother. It came to pass without the love of man, that the bride was great by child-conception. Never before or after in the world was any meed of woman like to that; it was a secret mystery of the Lord. All ghostly grace o'erspread the realm of earth, and many a thing became illumined then through life's Creator, teachings of ancient day, which lay concealed beneath the veil of night, the sages' songs prophetic, ere the Ruler came, who speedeth on its course their every prayer, if mortals will but praise full earnestly their Maker's name, as wisdom biddeth them.

O sight of peace! holy Jerusalem! choicest of royal thrones! citadel of Christ! the native seat of angels and of the just, the souls of whom alone rest in thee ever. exulting in glory. No sign of aught unclean shall ever be beheld in that abode, but every sin shall flee afar from thee, all curse and conflict; thou art gloriously full of holy promise, e'en as thou art named. See now thyself how all the wide creation and heaven's roof surveyeth thee about, on every side, and how the King of heaven seeketh thee in His course, and cometh Himself, and taketh His dwelling in thee, as in days of yore soothsayers so wise declared in words; they made known Christ's birth; they told it for thy comfort, thou best of cities! Now the Child is come, awakened to destroy the Hebrews' works; He bringeth thee joy; He looseneth thy bonds; He hath adventured Him for men; He knoweth their need,yea, how the wretched must await compassion.

Verily to men the mystery is not known; but Christ revealed in David's kinswoman, beloved of Him, that the guilt of Eve is all concluded now, the curses overthrown, and the lowlier sex is now made glorious. Hope is vouchsafed that now for men and women equally blessing may for evermore abide, amid the harmony of angels high above, with the Father of truth, to all eternity.'

death's dark shadow had they to endure.

Hopeful now, we trust in the salvation brought to the hosts of men through God's own word, which was in the beginning co-eternal with God, the Almighty Father, and is now flesh void of blemish, that the maiden bare to help the wretched. God was seen'mong us in all His sinlessness; together they dwelt,
the Creator's mighty Son and the son of man,
in peace on earth. Wherefore, as it is meet,
we may well thank the Lord of triumph aye,
that He vouchsafed to send to us Himself.

O thou God of spirits! how wisely thou wast named, with name aright, Emmanuel!
as the angel spake the word in Hebrew first,
which in its secret meaning fully now is thus interpreted:—'The Guardian of the skies, God's Self, is now with us'; e'en as of yore old men said truly that the King of kings, and eke the cleanly Priest, would come anon.
Thus long ago the great Melchizedek, so wise of soul, revealed the majesty of the eternal Ruler; he was the law-bringer;
he gave them precepts, who had awaited long that the Son Himself of the all-ruling Lord would purify the nations of the earth, and in His course would seek too the abyss, by the might of His spirit. Patiently have they waited in their fetters, till God's Child should come to the afflicted; wherefore spake thus those cast in torments: -- 'Come thou now thyself, Sovran of heaven! bring us salvation, weary thralls oppressed, worn out with weeping, with bitter burning tears. With thee alone resteth their cure for those in direst need. Visit us here, captives so sad of mood, nor leave behind thee, when thou turn'st from hence, so great a throng! but royally show forth thy mercy unto us, O Saviour Christ! O Prince of glory! let not the accursed hold sway o'er us; thy glory's endless joy vouchsafe to us, that those may worship thee, great Lord of hosts, whom thou createdst erst with thine own hands. Thou in the heights above dwellest for ever with the all-ruling Father.'

[MARY.] 'Alas! now, Joseph mine, thou child of Jacob, scion of David's stock, the glorious King, must thou forthwith renounce thy plighted troth, and leave my love?' [JOSEPH.] 'Too soon am I o'erwhelmed with grievous care; too soon bereft of honour. Forsooth through thee have I heard many a word, many an agonising bitter taunt, many an insult, and they revile me now with words of bitter wrath. My soul is sad: I must shed tears. God may easily heal the grievous sorrow of my heart, and comfort me, forlorn. Alas, young damsel, Mary maiden!' [MARY.] 'Why bemoanest thou, and criest aloud lamenting? Ne'er found I a fault in thee, or any cause of blame for evil done, and yet thou speak'st such words, as thou thyself wert filled with every sin and all transgression.' [JOSEPH.] 'Too much misery have I received from this conception. How can I escape the hateful words, or how can I find any answer now against mine angry foes? 'Tis widely known,

I joyfully received a maiden pure,
immaculate; and now all this is changed, through whom I know not. Neither availeth me,
to speak or to be silent; speak I the truth,
then must David's daughter suffer death, slain with stones; yet 'tis a harder lot to conceal the crime, and to be doomed to live a perjurer, henceforth loathed by all the folk, accursed 'mong men'. Then did the maid unravel
the mystery so true, and thus she spake:—

'Truly I say, by the Son of the Creator, the Saviour of souls, that yet I know not in conjugal communion any man anywhere on earth; but it was granted me, while still a damsel young and in my home,
that Gabriel, heaven's archangel, bade me hail,
and said in very truth, that heaven's Spirit should with His ray illume me, that I should bear life's Glory, an illustrious Son, the mighty Child of God, the bright Creator. Now, without guilt, am I become His temple; the Spirit of comfort hath dwelt within me. Wherefore dismiss thou now all sorry care, and say eternal thanks to the Lord's great Son, that I became His mother, nathless a maiden still, and thou, I ween, art named His earthly father, should the prophecy become fulfilled aright in Him Himself.'

O thou true Sovran, and thou peaceful King, thou King of all Kings, Christ Omnipotent! how wast thou, with thy glorious Father, aye existent before all the world's estates, a child begotten by His skill and might. There liveth not a mortal under heaven, no man however wise, who is so wise, that he can tell unto the ocean-dwellers and expound aright, how the Warden of the skies took thee in the beginning for His noble child. Of all the things that mankind hath e'er heard here upon earth, this thing first came to pass beneath the clouds, that God Omniscient, the Source of life, parted in sovran will the light from darkness, wielding His decree; and thus He, Lord of hosts, commanded then:-

'Let there be light for ever and for ever, a radiant joy for each of living men who in their generations shall be born.'

And so it came to pass, when 'twas ordained; a splendour shining bright amidst the stars lighted, through the course of time, the tribes of men.

He had Himself ordained that thou, His Son, shouldst be co-dwelling with thy only Lord, ere aught of this had ever come to pass. Lo, thou art Wisdom; with the Omnipotent thou wroughtest all this wide creation; wherefore is none so wise or so profound that he can tell thy origin aright to the sons of men. Come now, Lord of triumph, Creator of mankind, and graciously show forth thy mercy here; we all desire that we may know aright thy mother-kin, a mystery indeed; we cannot understand further in anywise thy kin paternal. Bless thou benignly all this middle-earth by thy coming hither, O thou Saviour Christ, and the golden gates that in the days of old, through the long ages, stood so firmly locked, do thou, high Lord of heaven, bid open now, and visit us, coming thy very Self humbly to earth! we need thy gracious help; the accursed wolf, the beast of darkest deed, hath scattered, Lord, thy flock, and far and wide dispersed it; what thou, Omnipotent, of old didst with thy blood redeem, the baleful one oppresseth cruelly, and taketh it in bondage, despite our anxious longing. Wherefore, Saviour, we pray thee earnestly, with all our thoughts, that speedily thou grant help unto us, poor weary wretches, that the soul's destroyer may fall precipitate to hell's abyss, and that thy handiwork, Creator of all men, may then arise and come, as it is meet, unto that noble realm in heaven above, whence the swart spirit, through our love of sin, beguiled us erst; wherefore inglorious for aye must we this wretchedness endure, unless thou, Lord eternal, living God, Helm of all created things, e'en now will free us speedily from mankind's bane.

that thou by might of holiness art queen of the hosts of glory, of the ranks of men on earth 'neath heaven, and of hell's habitants. for thou alone of all the race of men with noble aspiration didst resolve to bring thy maidenhood unto the Lord, to offer it in all thy sinlessness. No ring-adorned bride like unto thee hath ever come again 'mong humankind, to send with spirit pure the glorious gift unto the heavenly home. Wherefore the Lord triumphant bade His chief messenger fly hitherward from His great glory, and anon to thee reveal His might's avail, that thou shouldst bear in purity the Son of the Supreme, in mercy to mankind, and nathless, Mary, thou shouldst be held immaculate for ave.

with precious metal was the door immense, begirt with wondrous bands; he pondered much how any mortal man might e'er avail to lift the bolts and bars so firmly fixed, yea, ever unto all eternity,
or ope the fastening of that city-gate,
until God's angel joyfully to him disclosed how it would be, and spake these words:—

'I may tell thee,'—truly it came to pass,

'that God Himself, Father Omnipotent, in future time, yea, by His Spirit's might,
will glorify these golden gates withal,
and through these firm-set bolts will visit earth,
and after Him shall they remain for aye,
to all eternity, so firmly closed,
that no one else but He, the Saviour God, shall e'er avail to open them again.'

Now is the thing fulfilled that at that time the sage there with his eyes contemplated.

Thou art the wall-door; through thee the Omnipotent, the Ruler, once proceeded to this earth; and as He, Christ Almighty, found thee then adorned with all thy virtues, pure and choice, so He, the Prince of Angels, Lord of life, closed thee, immaculate e'en as of yore,

Show us now the grace that God's own messenger, the angel Gabriel, brought unto thee!

Forsooth we dwellers in earth's cities pray, that thou reveal their comfort unto men, thy very son. Hereafter we may all, with one accord, look forward hopefully, if now we see the Child upon thy breast.

Plead thou our cause for us with earnest words, that He may suffer us no longer here to list to Error in this vale of death, but that He lead us to the Father's realm, where sorrowless we may for evermore abide in glory with the Lord of hosts.

Help thou the wretched, and let thine advent hither comfort the forlorn, though through our lust of sin we have engaged in feud e'en against Thee. Pity thy servants! Bethink thee of our woes, how in our feebleness we stumble here, and wander abjectly. Come now, O King of men, tarry not too long; we need thy gentle grace! Thee rightly must all men endowed with speech, all earth's poor mortals, praise with might and main, for now the trusty Saviour hath revealed God unto us, that we may know Him right. Wherefore the heavenly race of Seraphim, so true, so zealous, and with glory crowned, doth sweetly sing amid the hosts above, hymning ever with unwearying notes, with rapture high, and with exalted strain, afar and near. Theirs is the noblest office in the service of the King. Christ granted them that with their eyes they may enjoy His being, and ceaselessly from pole to pole adore their Sovran Lord, wreathed with celestial light; and with their wings do they the presence guard of the Omnipotent, the eternal Lord, and throng around the Prince's throne, all eager which one of them may nearest to our Saviour disport in flight within the courts of peace; they praise Him, the Beloved, and in His light these words they speak to Him, and glorify the noble Source of all created things :-'Holy art thou, holy, Lord of archangels,

How wondrous is the change in mortal life, since the benign Creator of mankind took from a damsel flesh immaculate, nor knew she anything of human love, nor came the Lord of triumph down to earth through seed of man; but it was greater craft than earth's inhabitants might understand, how the Glory of the skies, through mystery, the Sovran Lord of heaven, effected help for all mankind, e'en through His mother's womb. to shepherds the sure joy that there was born upon this middle-earth, in Bethlehem, the Son of the Creator; yet in books it saith not that they appeared then at that glorious tide in robes of white, e'en as they did anon when the great Leader in Bethania, the Lord majestic, called His band of thanes, the host belovéd; on that welcome day they slighted not the word their Teacher spake, their bounteous Dispenser. Soon were they dight, men with their Master, for the holy burgh; there Splendour's Lord, the Helm of bliss, revealed full many a sign to them in mystic words, ere He ascended, only begotten Son, the Child with His own Father co-eternal; then forty numbered days had run their course, since He had risen first from earth, from death. Then had He fulfilled the prophets' words, as they had sung before throughout the world, yea, by His passion. His servants lauded Him, they praised all-lovingly the Source of life, the Father of creation! Then suddenly a sound was heard on high, loud in the air; a band of heavenly angels, a beauteous host, the messengers of glory, in legion came; our King departed thence, e'en through the temple's roof, where they beheld, they who were watching still the Dear One's track, His chosen thanes, there in that meeting-place; they saw their Lord, the Child divine, ascend from earth into the heights; sad were their souls; their spirit's grief burned hot within their hearts, for now they might no longer see 'neath heaven One so beloved as He. Then raised a song the messengers celestial; praised they the Prince; they lauded life's Creator; joyed they in the light that gleamed so brightly from the Saviour's head; saw they angels twain, resplendent, fair, shining in splendour 'round that first-born Child, the Glory of all Kings; they cried out from on high, in wondrous words, o'er all the hosts of men, with voices resonant:—'Why bide ye here, and stand about, ye Galilean men? Now surely do ye see the Sovran true wending triumphant to the empyreal sphere. The Chief of princes with these angel-hosts, the Lord of all mankind, ascendeth hence unto His native home, His fatherland.'

Then was Glory's Guardian, the archangels' King, the Helm of holy men, bewrapt in clouds, high o'er the roofs. Joy was renewed and bliss in heaven's cities at the Prince's coming; on His own Father's right-hand sat He down triumphant, the eternal Source of good.

Sad then in spirit, went the valiant men and journeyed to Jerusalem's holy burgh, departing from the place where they so late beheld with their own eyes God rise aloft, their kind Dispenser. There was unbroken weeping, their faithful love was overwhelmed with grief, their hearts were hot, their bosoms surged within, their thoughts were all a-glow. His glorious thanes awaited there their Sovran Lord's behests, within that noble burgh, ten nights withal, as He Himself, the Lord of heaven, bade, e'er He ascended in omnipotence to heaven's keeping, and white angels came toward the bounteous Prince of warrior-men.

that radiant angels at that holy tide, descending in the clouds, in legion came to meet Him; then in glorious heaven arose
the greatest jubilee. 'Twas well befitting that His servants came to the Beatitude, unto the Prince's city, brightly clad,
a beauteous host; they saw their welcome Lord
on His exalted throne, Sovran of heaven, Source of men's life, ruling in splendour all,— this middle-earth and the majestic host.

'Now hath the Holy One despoiled hell of all the tribute that in ancient days it basely gorged within that home of strife.
Now are they quelled, the devil's champions,
in living torture humbled and held bound,
bereft of prowess, down in hell's abyss;
the gruesome foes might not in battle speed with weapon-thrusts, when He, the King of Glory, the Helm of heaven's realm, waged warfare there against His ancient foes with His sole might.
Then drew He forth from durance the best spoil,
a folk unnumbered, from the burgh of fiends,
this very band which ye here gaze upon.
Now will He seek the Spirit's throne of grace,
the proper Child of God, Saviour of souls,

'Tis therefore fitting that the tribes of men give thanks unto the Lord for every good which late and early He hath rendered us, through mystery of wonders manifold. He giveth us food and fulness of possession, wealth o'er the spacious earth, and gentle weather 'neath the protecting heavens; the sun and moon, noblest of constellations, heaven's candles, shine forth for all mankind on earth alike; dew falleth and rain; they call abundance forth to nourish life for all the race of man; earth's riches they increase. For all these gifts must we give thanks and praise unto our Lord, yet first for our salvation, the hope vouchsafed, when He at His ascension turned away the miseries which we had suffered long, when He, the one-born King, on man's behalf, compounded with His Father, the Beloved, the greatest feud, averted the decree, for our soul's peace, which had been uttered erst shalt dwell in toil, and exile shalt endure, shalt sing the death-song for thy foes' delight, and shalt be turned again to that same earth with worms o'ercharged, from whence thou shalt anon, thereafter, seek the fire of punishment'.

Lo! this the noble Prince assuaged for us, when He took limb and fleshly covering from child of man; when He, the Maker's Son, the Lord of hosts, willed to ascend on high unto the home of angels; at that holy tide, the wish arose to help us, the forlorn.

Of Him sang Job a song as he well could;
he praised the Helm of men, lauded the Saviour,
and in his love devised a noble name for the Ruler's Son, and named Him as a bird,
a name which Jews might no wise understand.
By virtue of the Spirit's strength divine, hidden and secret from His foes on earth was that bird's flight, from those who in their breasts had understanding dark, a stony heart;
they would not recognise the glorious signs which He, God's noble Child, had wrought' fore them, various and manifold, on middle-earth.

E'en thus the noble Bird assayed his flight;

whilom He sought on high the angels' land,
the noble home, so proud, so strong in might;

whilom He came adown to earth again;

He sought earth's region in His spirit's grace, and wended to the world. Of this the prophet sang:—

'He was borne aloft embraced in angels' arms unto the spacious glory of His might, above the heaven's splendour, high and holy.'

Of that Bird's flight they might no knowledge have, who made denial of the ascension, and who believed not that the Source of life, in form of man, all holy from the earth, was raised aloft above the glorious hosts.

Then He who shaped the world, God's Spirit-Son, ennobled us, and granted gifts to us, eternal homes 'mid angels upon high; and wisdom, too, of soul, full manifold He sowed and set within the minds of men.

fore warrior-bands one can awake the harp, the minstrel's joy. One can interpret well the law divine, and one the planets' course and wide creation. One cunningly can write the spoken word. To one He granteth skill, when in the fight the archers swiftly send the storm of darts, the winged javelin, over the shield's defence. Fearlessly another can o'er the salt sea urge the ocean-bark and stir the surging depth. One can ascend the lofty tree and steep. One can fashion well steeled sword and weapon. One knoweth the plains' direction, the wide ways. Thus the Ruler, Child divine, dispenseth unto us His gifts on earth; He will not give to any one man all the spirit's wisdom, lest pride injure him, raised far above the rest by his sole might.

IV.

Thus God Almighty, King of created things, ennobleth by unsparing gifts, by crafts, the progeny of earth, and giveth joy unto the blessed in heaven, and setteth peace for angels and for men to all eternity.

Lo now, what are these gems that shine resplendent, but e'en God Himself? He is the true refulgence of the sun, a noble light for angels and for men. O'er all the middle-earth the moon doth shine, a ghostly star, e'en as the Church of God glisteneth bright, whene'er the True and Just are linked together; as it saith in books, that when the Child divine, the King all pure, had risen from the earth, then the Church here of the faithful ones endured oppression beneath the tyranny of heathen rule; then did the sinful take no heed of truth, nor of their spirit's need, but brake and burned God's temple; they hated and destroyed, and bloodshed wrought; nathless through the Spirit's grace the welfare of God's servants was maintained. after the ascension of the eternal Lord. Thereof sang Solomon, the son of David, all-wise in song and secrets spiritual, the ruler of the nations, and these words spake:-'It shall be known once, that the angels' King,

The first leap was, when He came to the damsel, the spotless maid, and sinlessly took there a human form, and was anon the solace of all mankind. The second leap was this, the Infant's birth, when He was in the manger, the Glory of all Glories swathed in clothes, in form of child. The heavenly King's career was the third leap, when He, the Father's Solace, ascended on the rood. Into the sepulchre was the fourth leap, when He had left the tree and lay within that cave. The fifth leap was, when He bowed down the multitude of hell in living torment, and bound their king within, the devils' advocate, so grim of mood, with fiery fetters, where he lieth yet, fastened in prison there with manacles, and shackled with his sins. The sixth leap was the revel of the Holy, when He rose unto His ancient home; the angelic host was blithe with sweetest laughter and with joy on that holy tide; they saw the Crown of Glory, the noble Chief, approach those bright abodes, His Fatherland. That revel of the Prince brought endless joy to those blessed denizens.

Thus God's eternal Child, here upon earth, sprang boldly o'er the lofty hills, by leaps, from mount to mount; and e'en so must we men, with our hearts' inmost thoughts, by such leaps, spring from virtue unto virtue, and for glory strive, so that through holy works we may ascend to the highest height, where there is joy and bliss and ministering legions. Great is our need to seek salvation there with all our hearts, where earnestly in spirit'we repose, so that the Saviour-Child, the living God, may with our bodies soar aloft from hence.

Wherefore we must contemn all idle lusts and wounds of sin, and cherish goodlier things; we have our solace in the Omnipotent, our Father in heaven; He, the Holy One, will send His angels hither from on high to shield us from the noxious arrow-shafts of those that work our bane, lest gruesome fiends should deal us wounds, whenas the Enemy, the great Accuser, sendeth the bitter dart among the folk of God from his drawn bow.

consume the treasures which men prized of old, whilst pride abode with them upon this earth. Wherefore would I instruct each well-beloved, lest he be careless of his spirit's need, or pour it forth in boasting, whilst God willeth that he may here abide within the world, whilst soul with body, the guest-house it is in, may journey on together. It behoveth each, during his life-days, to remember well, how all-benign was the Omnipotent when He first came, e'en as the angel spake. He will be stern then, when He cometh again, wrathful and rigorous. The heavens shall quail, and all the great estates of middle-earth shall quake, when He, bright King, requiteth them, for that they lived on earth in wickedness, stained with transgression; wherefore they shall long, weary of life, beset with flames, endure dire retribution in a sea of fire, when the great King in highest majesty to that tribunal cometh; then men's dismay, the cry of anguish, shall be heard aloud amid the noises of the heavens; sadly shall they bewail before the eternal Judge, who have but faint reliance in their works.

Then greater terror shall be manifest than ever hath been heard of upon earth, yea, from the first beginning; at that sudden time each evil-doer will have liefer far than all this transient creation some place where, in that onward rush of triumph, he may conceal him, when the Lord of hosts,
the Chief of Princes, shall adjudge to all,
to friends and foes alike, to every man,
a righteous recompense. Great is our need,
that in this barren time, ere that grim dread,
we should bethink us of our spirit's grace.

Now'tis most like as if we fare in ships on the ocean-flood, over the water cold, driving our vessels through the spacious seas with horses of the deep. A perilous way is this of boundless waves, and these are stormy seas, on which we toss here in this feeble world, o'er the deep paths. Ours was a sorry plight, until at last we sailed unto the land, over the troubled main. Help came to us, that brought us to the haven of salvation, God's Spirit-Son, and granted grace to us, that we might know, e'en from the vessel's deck, where we must bind with anchorage secure

Part Third. The Day of Judgment.

I.

IN ITH sudden fear, at midnight, direfully, the great day of the Lord Omnipotent shall overwhelm the denizens of earth and bright creation, e'en as some wily robber, some daring thief that prowleth in the dark, in the swart night, surpriseth suddenly careless mortals bound in happy sleep, and basely challengeth them unprepared. Then unto Zion's hill a mighty host, radiant and blissful, shall ascend together, the faithful of the Lord; glory shall be theirs. Then, too, from all four corners of the world, from furthest regions of the realm of earth, resplendent angels shall with one accord sound their loud trumpets, and mid-earth shall quake beneath the feet of men. shall they blow together toward the stars' career, and sing melodiously from south and north, from east and west, o'er all creation's realm, and wake from death unto the final doom, aghast from the old earth, the sons of men and all mankind, and bid them then arise forthwith from their deep sleep. There shall one hear a sorrowing host and dismal, hard bestead, sorely afeard, bewailing woefully their deeds when living. Of all presaging signs, which aye, erewhile or since, were shown to men, this shall be greatest; to wit, the hidden hosts of angels and of devils, the bright and dark, shall be commingled there; yea, both shall come, the white and black, e'en as a home is shaped for angels and for devils all unlike.

Then unto Zion's hill, full suddenly,
a sun-beam from south-east shall come anon from the Creator, shining more brilliantly than mortals may conceive of in their minds, gleaming full brightly; then the Son of God shall hitherward appear o'er heaven's vaults;

before the Lord, the fiercest fire shall rage;

and the stars shall fall from heaven precipitate, tempest-driven through the stormy air.

Then to the judgment, with His angel-host, will come the Omnipotent, the King of Kings, the Lord majestic, and eke a glorious band shall be there of His own thanes; yea, holy souls shall journey with their Lord, when the Guardian of men shall visit all the races of the earth with direful penalty. From pole to pole the blast of heaven's trumpet shall be heard, and from all seven sides the winds shall moan, and with tumultuous roar shall blow and break, waking and wasting all the world with storm, o'erthrowing all creation with their breath; a grievous crash shall then be manifest, loud and immeasurable; of all fierce dins this shall be fiercest, a terror unto folk.

Then legions of the race of men, accursed, shall throng unto the all-embracing flame, and living feel the fire's fatal touch, some up, some down, with burning all fulfilled. Small doubt that there the cheerless race of Adam shall utter lamentations, woebegone, afflicted with no feeble tribulation, but with great anguish, direfullest and worst; the livid surge of fire, the swarthy flame, shall seize all there alike, at the same time, afar and wide; to wit, seas with their fish, earth with her hills, and eke the heaven above bright with its constellations; the avenging flame shall forthwith ravage all the regions three, fiercely, with fearful onset; all middle-earth, afflicted at that mighty time, shall mourn.

Stone walls a-many, throughout earth's tract, with headlong ruin fell; and all the earth was troubled sore with fear, and quaked with sudden shock; the spacious sea showed forth its mighty power, and burst its bonds, and o'er earth's bosom dashed in angry mood; yea, in their radiant homes the stars then lost their winsome beauty; at that self-same time the heaven serene discerned who erst had made it

E'en guilty men beheld in very sooth on that same day, whereon He suffered, a marvel passing great,to wit, earth yielded those who in her lay; then rose they up and living stood again, whom she had erewhile held with firmest grip, the dead and buried, who had kept in mind their Lord's commands. Eke sin-avenging hell knew that the Maker and the ruling God was come, when it surrendered up that host from her hot bosom; blissful were many hearts, grief vanished from their souls. Lo! too, the sea declared who set it on its spacious bed,the glorious King; certes, it made a path for Him to tread, when God desired to fare o'er the ocean-waves; the water durst not then submerge its Master's feet with flowing tide. Yea, many a tree, not few, likewise proclaimed who shaped them with their blossoms, when mighty God ascended one of them, where for the need of earth's inhabitants He suffered pain, a loathsome death, to succour human kind. The noblest of the species of the earth, and eke the lofty structures upon high, for that alone were seized with sudden fear, and sad became; in their inherent nature, though they no mental understanding had, yet wondrously they knew it, when their Lord forth from His body fared. Benighted men, harder than flints, would not acknowledge then their Maker, that the Lord, Almighty God, had saved them from the agonies of hell, e'en by His holy might, nor that of yore, in the world's beginning, the prophets of the Lord, far-seeing men, holy and wise of mind, had told to folk anent the noble Child, oft-times, not once, by wisdom of their souls, that through the noble woman He should be a precious Rock here in this world below, the Refuge and the Help of all mankind, the Lord of glory, the first Cause of bliss.

What hope hath he who wittingly disdaineth to bear in mind his Master's gentle lore, and all the miseries He endured for men, wishful that we might possess on high, to all eternity, the home of bliss? Grievous indeed shall be their lot, who damned by deadly sins must on that awful day of mighty doom behold with souls a-weary the gashes, wounds, and torments of the Lord; greatest their woe to see how that the King with His own body ransomed them from sin, in meekness, so that they might live, devoid of their ill-deeds, and have the endless bliss of heavenly glory. They did not know the thanks due to their Sovran for this heritage; wherefore, to their affliction, shall they see signs unpropitious manifest in God, when Christ shall sit there on His kingly throne, on His high seat, while the Almighty Father, the radiant Creator, Lord of the hosts of heaven, prescribeth righteously withal for every man according to his deeds.

Then shall be gathered on the right-hand side of Christ Himself the cleanly multitude, chosen for their virtues; in their life-days joyfully had they performed His word. Workers of wickedness shall be disposed before their Maker on the worser side; victory's true King shall bid the throng of sinful mortals wend unto His left; discovered, shall they there bewail and quake, afeard before the Lord; as foul as goats, an unpure folk, they may not hope for grace. When the spirits' doom shall be decreed 'fore God unto all generations as they wrought, three signs shall then be plainly visible at once upon the blessed, for they kept well their Lord's behest, both by their words and works. The first sign manifest shall be, to wit, that they shall shine with light before the folk, with bliss and brightness, throughout the homes on high; their former deeds shall shine upon them there. upon each of them, e'en brighter than the sun. The third shall be, that in the baleful gloom the blissful throng shall contemplate the damned suffering in penance for their sins sore pain, the surging flame and the bitter-biting jaws of luring serpents,—a shoal of burning things; thence winsome joy shall rise within their souls, beholding other men endure the ills that they escaped, through mercy of the Lord. Then the more eagerly shall they thank God for all their glory and delight, seeing that He both saved them from these grievous pangs, and granted unto them eternal joys; hell shall be locked for them, heaven's realm vouchsafed. This shall be their lot who erst kept well, through their souls' love, the will of the Creator.

But all unlike, forsooth, shall be the plight of the others; they shall see there in themselves too many woes, a multitude of sins, direst affliction for their former deeds;
sorrowing there, sore pain shall cleave to them,
anguish and bale, rising from sources three.
The first shall be, that fore them they shall see,

A third affliction shall the wretched know, yea, dire lament, when they behold the pure, how gladly they rejoice in the good deeds, that they, unhappy ones, despised to do erewhile, when still the days of life ran on; and weeping sore because of their own works because they wrought unrighteousness before, they shall behold their betters shine in glory. for the body's vain and all-delusive joy, and for the idle lust of the vile flesh. There they abashed, o'erwhelmed with ignominy, shall wander giddily, bearing their evil deeds, the burden of their sins, whilst all folk gaze; 'twere better for them had they erst felt shame for each base deed and each transgression. for all their evil works, before one man, telling God's servant that too well they knew ill-deeds within them. The confessor cannot look through the flesh unto the soul, whether a man telleth truth or lie, when he his sins avoweth; nathless a wight can heal each noxious ill, each unclean sin, if he tell it but to one; and none may there conceal, on that stern day, guilt unamended; multitudes shall see it. Verily, we shall then, with bodily sight, behold the wounds of sin upon our souls, our base iniquities, our inmost thoughts of wickedness, our unclean cogitations. Not any man may tell it to another, with how great zeal, by every artifice, each mortal striveth to attain life's goal, anxious to protract existence forth, to wash sin's rust away, afflicting himself,

'Receive ye now, 'mid friends, My Father's realm, the blissful glories and the beauteous home. dight winsomely for you, ere worlds were wrought,yours, when ye might behold, with the best beloved, life's true wealth, the sweet delights of heaven. This meed ye merited, when gladsomely, with gentle cheer, ye welcomed needy men, the wretched of the world; when in My name they humbly prayed you for compassion, then helped ye them, and gave them sheltering, bread to the hungry, garments to the naked, and those that lay sick and in sorry pain, suffering grievously, bound by disease, their spirits ye sustained in kindly wise, with loving hearts. All this ye did for Me, when ye in friendship sought them, and with comfort ve staved their souls; wherefore ye shall in bliss endured the suffering of their baleful strokes; oft on My visage spittle fell from mouths of impious workers of iniquity; they mingled, too, for Me full bitterly an unsweet drink of vinegar and gall; for mankind bore I then the wrath of foes: they followed Me with torments; reckless in hate, they struck Me with their scourges,—all that pain, their scorn and cruel gibes, in humbleness I bore for thee,—and round about My head a bitter-biting crown they bent anon, fiercely they pressed it on,—'twas wrought of thorns. Then was I hanged upon a lofty tree, and fastened to a rood; with a spear there from my side they poured out on to earth My blood and gore. That thou thereby shouldst be delivered from the devil's tyranny, all sinless suffered I this punishment, this sore affliction, till from my body the living spirit sent I forth alone. See now the fatal wounds they made of yore upon My palms and eke upon My feet, by which I hung full firmly fastened there; here mayest thou see, too, manifest e'en yet, the gory wound, the gash upon My side.

I there received thy pain that thou in bliss mightst happily enjoy My native realm; and dearly by My death I bought for thee long life, that thou mightst thenceforth evermore dwell in the light, beauteous, void of sin. My body's flesh, the which had harmed no man, lay buried in the earth, hidden deep beneath, down in its sepulchre, that thou mightst shine mighty 'mid angels, in the skies above. Wherefore didst thou forsake the beauteous life, which graciously I bought for thee, in love, with Mine own body, to help thee in thy plight? So witless wast thou, that thou didst not show thanks to thy Lord for thy redemption. Nought claim I now for that sore death of Mine, so bitter, which I there endured for thee, but render Me thy life, for which, in martyrdom, I gave thee formerly Mine own as price. I claim of thee the life thou hast so sinfully destroyed to thine own shame, with base transgression.

Why hast thou wittingly with filth defiled, through wicked lust and through foul sinfulness, the tabernacle I sanctified in thee, to be the cherished home of My delight?

Yea, thou didst shamefully pollute with guilt that body which I ransomed for Myself from the grasp of foes, and then forbade it sin.

Why hast thou hanged Me worse on thy hands' cross than when of old I hung? Methinks this harder;
thy sins' cross is now heavier for Me,
on which I am bound fast, unwillingly, than was that other which I erst ascended,
with Mine own will, whenas thy misery
rued Me so much at heart, when I drew thee from hell, where thou thyself wouldst afterwards abide.

I in the world was poor, that thou in heaven mightst be rich, wretched was I in thy world, that thou in Mine mightst blissful be.

But for all this thou knewest not in thy heart
the gratitude due to thy Saviour.

I bade that ye should cherish tenderly
My brethren throughout all the world's domain;
with the wealth which I had granted you on earth that ye should help the poor; ill have ye done so;
ye forbade the poor to enter 'neath your roof,
and ye withheld from them full everything,
in your hard hearts,—raiment from the naked,
food from the foodless; though weary and infirm,

Then over all of them, over that fated folk, the Lord of triumph shall Himself send forth a dreadful edict, full of tribulation, and to that host of sinful souls shall say:—
'Go now accursed, wilfully cut off from angels' joy, into eternal fire, which, hot and fiercely grim, was dight of yore for the devil, Satan, and his comrades eke, and all that swarthy shoal; therein shall ye fall.'

They may not then deride, bereft of rede, the King's command; they who erst warred 'gainst God shall quickly fall into the grim abyss. The Lord of empire shall be stern and mighty, angry and fearful; upon this track of earth no foe may then abide before His face.

He shall sweep the victor-sword with His right hand, that the devils shall fall down the deep abyss into swart flame; the bands of sinful ones into earth's realm beneath; the fated spirits into the camp of foes; the guilty shoal, damned to perdition, into the prison-house, the devil's death-hall. Ne'er shall they seek again remembrance of the Lord, nor'scape their sins, but, crime-stained, they shall there, bewrapt with flame endure destruction; vengeance for their sins shall they see revealed; that is eternal death; through all the livelong night the fiery gulf may ne'er avail to purge their sins away from that hell-race, the stain from off their soul. But the deep pit feedeth still the weary ones; bottomless it keepeth the spirits in its gloom; with its old flame it burneth them; and with terrors chill, with hateful serpents, and with torments many, with sharp and deadly jaws, it scatheth folk. The sons of men shall then shed tears and shall bewail their sins. when time availeth not; too late shall they devise help for their spirits, when the Lord of hosts will not give heed how base transgressors there, so sorely, at that all-disclosing time, deplore what erst they cherished; that time of sorrowing will not avail that he who will not now gain life's salvation, while he liveth here, may there find out the healing remedy. Then, in retribution for their sins, the shoal of guilty ones shall be disparted, the base from the holy, unto pernicious death; there thieves, and such as wrought cruel injury, liars and adulterers, shall have no hope of life; and the forsworn shall see their crimes' reward, grievous and fiercely grim; then hell shall take the host of faithless ones; the Lord shall give them in perdition to the fiends; sinners shall endure dire racking agony; wretched shall he be who fain doth wickedly; as a guilty wretch upon that judgment-day shall he be severed from his Creator, doomed to the death below, among hell's race, adown in the hot fire, 'neath the barriers of flame; there shall men stretch their limbs, to be bound and to be burnt anon, and to be scourged, in punishment for sin.

Then the Holy Spirit, through the might of God, at the King's command, shall lock the gates of hell, the worst of torture-houses, full of fire, with the host of fiends therein; for devils and for men this torment shall be direst. That is a joyless home;

That shall be the fairest of joys, when they at first shall meet, the angel and the happy soul, when it resigneth the joys of earth, forsaketh these frail delights, and from the body shall depart.

Then shall the angel speak, (his the more exalted state,) one spirit shall greet the other, and announce to it God's errand:—

'Now thou mayst depart whither thou wast yearning longtime and often; I am to lead thee; the ways shall be pleasant for thee, and the glory's bright light shall be revealed; thou art now a traveller unto that holy home where sorrow never cometh, the refuge from affliction; but there is angels' harmony, goodwill and happiness and souls' repose; and there for evermore may they rejoice and revel with the Lord, who here, on earth, fulfil his judgments; He holdeth for them, in heaven, eternal recompense; over the cities there, the most high, the King of kings, holdeth sway.

These are the structures which do not decay, nor, through misery, shall life fail those who dwell therein, but the longer the better it shall be for them;

youth shall they enjoy and the grace of God.

Thither, after death, the souls of righteous men may come, who erewhile teach and do

II. HOMILIA IN ASCENSIONE DOMINI.

(Cp. passus secundus.)

Albæ vestes lætitiæ indicia.

Act. i. 9.

(§ 9.) Hoc autem nobis primum quærendum est, quidnam fit quod nato Domino apparuerunt Angeli, et tamen non leguntur in albis vestibus apparuisse: ascendente autem Domino missi Angeli in albis leguntur vestibus apparuisse. Sic etenim scriptum est: Videntibus illis elevatus est, et nubes suscepit eum ab oculis Cumque intuerentur in calum euntem illum, ecce duo viri steterunt juxta illos in vestibus albis. In albis autem vestibus gaudium et solemnitas mentis ostenditur. Quid est ergo quod nato Domino, non in albis vestibus; ascendente autem Domino, in albis vestibus Angeli apparent: nisi quod tunc magna solemnitas Angelis facta est, cum cœlum Deus homo penetravit? Ouia nascente Domino videbatur divinitas humiliata: ascendente vero Domino, est humanitas exaltata. Albæ etenim vestes exaltationi magis congruunt quam humiliationi. In assumtione ergo ejus Angeli in albis vestibus videri debuerunt: quia qui in nativitate sua apparuit Deus humilis, in Ascensione sua ostensus

(§ 10.) Sed hoc nobis magnopere, fratres carissimi, in hac solemnitate pensandum est: quia deletum est hodierna die chirographum damnationis nostræ, mutata est sententia corruptionis nostræ. Illa enim natura cui dictum est: Terra es, et in terram ibis, hodie in cœlum ivit. Pro hac ipsa namque carnis nostræ sublevatione per figuram beatus Job Dominum avem vocat. Quia enim Ascensionis ejus mysterium Judæam non intelligere conspexit, de infidelitate ejus sententiam protulit, dicens: Semitam ignoravit avis. Avis enim recte appelatus est

De hac solemnitate per Psalmistam dicitur: Elevata Psal. viii. 2. est magnificentia tua super cælos. De hac rursus ait: Ascendit Psal. xlvi, 6. Deus in jubilatione, et Dominus in voce tubæ. De hac iterum dicit: Ascendens in altum, captivam duxit captivitatem, dedit dona Psal. lxvii, 19. hominibus. Ascendens quippe in altum, captivam duxit captivitatem: quia corruptionem nostram virtute suæ incorruptionis absorbuit. Quousque enim Dominus ascendit ad cælos, sancta ejus Ecclesia adversa mundi omnimodo formidavit: at postquam ejus Ascensione roborata est, aperte prædicavit, quod occulte credidit. Elevatus est ergo sol, et luna stetit in ordine suo: quia cum Dominus cœlum petiit, sancta ejus Ecclesia in auctoritate prædicationis excrevit. Consideravit namque tantorum operum culmina, et ait: Ecce iste venit saliens in montibus. Veniendo quippe ad redemtionem nostram, quosdam, ut ita dixerim, saltus dedit. Vultis, fratres carissimi, ipsos ejus saltus agnoscere? De cœlo venit in uterum, de utero venit in præsepe, de præsepe venit in crucem, de cruce venit in sepulcrum, de sepulcro rediit in cœlum. Ecce ut nos post se currere faceret, quosdam pro nobis (§ 11.) Unde, fratres carissimi, oportet ut illuc sequamur corde, ubi eum corpore ascendisse credimus. Desideria terrena fugiamus, nihil nos jam delectet in infimis, qui patrem habemus in cœlis. Et hoc nobis est magnopere perpendendum: quia is qui placidus ascendit, terribilis redibit: et quidquid nobis cum mansuetudine præcepit, hoc a nobis cum districtione exiget. Nemo ergo indulta pœnitentiæ tempora parvipendat: nemo curam sui, dum valet, agere negligat : quia Redemtor noster tanto tunc in judicium districtior veniet, quanto nobis ante judicium magnam patientiam prærogavit. Hæc itaque vobiscum, fratres, agite: hæc in mente sedula cogitatione versate. Quamvis adhuc rerum perturbationibus animus fluctuet: jam tamen spei vestræ anchoram in æternam patriam figite, intentionem mentis in vera luce solidate. Ecce ad cœlum ascendisse Dominum audivimus. Hoc ergo servemus in meditatione, quod credimus. Et si adhuc hic tenemur infirmitate corporis, sequamur tamen eum passibus amoris. Non autem deserit desiderium nostrum ipse qui dedit, Jesus Christus Dominus noster, qui vivit et regnat cum Deo Patre in unitate Spiritus Sancti Deus, per omnia secula seculorum. Amen.

Magnus illis dicet iudex: cum iuvistis pauperes, Panem, domum, vestem dantes, me iuvistis humiles.

Nec tardabit et sinistris loqui iustus arbiter: In gehennae maledicti flammas hinc discedite;

Obsecrantem me audire despexistis mendicum, Nudo vestem non dedistis, neglexistis languidum.

Peccatores dicent: Christe, quando te vel pauperem, Te, rex magne, vel infirmum contemnentes sprevimus.

Quibus contra iudex altus: mendicanti quamdiu Opem ferre despexistis, me sprevistis improbi.

Retro ruent tum iniusti ignes in perpetuos, Vermis quorum non morietur, flamma nec restinguitur,

(§ 2.) Omnia quippe elementa auctorem suum venisse testata sunt. Ut enim de eis quiddam usu humano loquar : Deum hunc cæli esse cognoverunt, quia sub plantis ejus se calcabile præbuit. Infernus agnovit, quia hos quos tenebat mortuos, reddidit. Et tamen hunc, quem Dominum omnia insensiblia elementa senserunt, adhuc infidelium Judæorum corda Deum esse minime cognoscunt, et duriora saxis, scindi, ad pænitendum nolunt: eumque confiteri abnegant, quem elementa, ut diximus, aut signis aut scissionibus Deum clamabant.—(In Evang. Lib. 1. Homilia x.)

CRITICAL NOTES.

PART I.

r. It must be borne in mind that the 'Christ' is a fragment; the beginning of the poem is lost; of the missing part a single word still remains, viz., cyninge (i.e. 'to the king'); this is the first word in the Exeter MS.; I have purposely omitted it, so as to give the appearance of completeness to the poem, but there is no authority for the capital letters. The first words of the MS. run as follows:—

cyninge · Su eart se weall stan, etc.

1-4. cf. Matthew xxi. 42; Ephes. ii. 20-22; iv. 15, etc.

3. heafod, MS. heafod.

6. b[yri]g, the g is just visible in the MS.; after b there is what I take to be the upper part of a curved y still traceable, resembling in shape an o (certainly not u); the letters ri are conjectural.

eagna, originally -nan; the erased n is still visible.

9. forlæt, MS. forlet.

11. cræftga, MS. cræstga.

12-14. cp. Amos ix. 11; Acts xv. 16.

13. hra can hardly be read, owing to the action of some liquid, which has almost obliterated a number of words on this and the next page of the MS.

15. cp. Luke i. 71.

17. pu reccend, MS. pa.

19. eadga, after ga, which comes at the end of the line in the MS., a small piece of parchment has been cut out; one letter at most could have been written on it; I am inclined to think that eadga is what the poet wrote; Grein reads—

'eadga'ð us siges, o'ðrum forwyrne'ð, wlitigan wilsi'ðes . . .'

- 20. wilstpes, the last two letters can scarcely be read, the whole word is barely visible.
- 22. [Nu gemærsi]giað, five or six letters are obliterated before -giað; the reading in the text is purely conjectural; Gr. suggests [modgeomre halsi]giað, but the space in the MS. renders the reading impossible.
- 23. hete . . . ceose, two or three letters are obliterated before ceose; the first of the missing letters was probably h, judging by the alliterative requirements of the line; her (i.e. 'here,' or 'now') should, perhaps, be supplied. Gr., ignoring the fact that the want of an alliterative word in the second half of the line is due to the obliteration of letters before ceose, suggested héose for ceose, formulating an A. S. héosan, 'festinare'; later (Germania, 1865), he withdrew this suggestion in favour of [heo]fe (i.e. 'with lamentation').

I cannot detect, as Schipper seems to have been able to do in 1870, (v. Germania, 1874,) any trace of the reading to hofe before ceose; he adds, 'das MS. ist hier jedoch schwer leserlich.'

- 25. wil-siò, l-s almost obliterated in MS. but iò quite legible; Grein's suggestion wyrnde, (Germania, 1865,) is therefore untenable; it would be best, perhaps, to take hwonne as directly dependent on sorgende, 'yearning for the time when.'
  - 29. pe he to wuldre forlet, 'whom he hath admitted to glory.'
  - 30. we, MS. pe. 32. se pe, hardly legible in MS.
  - 41. geond-spreot, so MS.; Gr. geondspreat.
- 46. ryne gemiclao, lit. 'enlargeth the course,' i.e. 'hasteneth the progress.' 48. ho[r]scne, MS. hoscne.
- 68. geneode, so MS.; Gr. genedde (i.e. pp. of genedan); but the MS. reading is obviously correct; geneoan = 'to venture,' 'to strive.' Thorpe was similarly troubled by the line, and suggested that a leaf was wanting after nearo.
  - 69. hu, so MS.; Gr. nu.
  - 76. mod, so MS.; Gr. emends to môt; but mod was often used 158

in A.S. with special reference to human passions and desires, and might well be rendered by 'desire' in this passage.

90. solimæ, MS. solimę.

92. mund minne, so MS.; Th. inne.

mund; cp. Icel. mundr, 'the money paid by the bridegroom to the father of the bride,' also 'the bridegroom's gift to the bride'; this is seemingly the only recorded instance of the word in A. S. literature, here evidently used metaphorically. It must be carefully distinguished from mund, 'hand,' 'protection,' which is feminine, though ultimately the words may be connected.

97. wærgða, so MS.; Gr. wærgðu.

ro3. earendel, it is difficult to translate the word adequately; some bright star is evidently meant, probably the same as Orvandels-tá, 'Orwendel's toe,' mentioned in the Edda. Thor carried Orwendel from Jotunheim in a basket on his back; Orwendel's toe stuck out of the basket, and got frozen; Thor broke it off, and flung it at the sky, and made a star of it, which is called Örvandels-tá; (v. Grimm's Deutsche Myth). That the story of Orwendel was Christianised in mediæval times is attested by the German story of Orendel in the Heldenbuch, where the hero wins 'the seamless coat' of his master. 'Earendel' does not occur elsewhere in A. S. poetry as a poetical designation of Christ; the word is interpreted in the Epinal glossary by 'jubar.'

The spelling in the Erfurt Gloss 'oerendil' is noteworthy. It seems probable that 'Earendel'=Orion,' the constellation brightest at winter-time, and Örvandels-tá'='Rigel,' the chief star of the constellation.

Cp. the opening lines of Paradise Lost, Book iii.:-

'Hail, holy light, offspring of Heaven first-born! Or of the Eternal co-eternal beam,' etc.

Cf. John i. 4, 9.

107. inlihtes, so MS.; Gr. inlihtest.

112. byldo, corrected in MS. from hyldo.

117. sceadu, corrected in MS. from sceadu.

118. cf. John i. 1-5, 14.

127. bi gewyrhtum, 'accordingly to his deeds,' i.e. 'deservedly.'

132. eft, MS. est.

142. Read 'pætte sunu meotudes sylfa wolde.'

152. anum . . . ofer-pearfum, about five letters obliterated;

Gr. anum oferpearfum, ignoring the missing word.

153. Hæftas hyge-geomre hider [gesece Ne læt] pe behindan ponne pu heonan cyrre. About ten letters are obliterated after hider; the bracketed words are purely conjectural; Gr. 'hider [gesohtest]: [ne] pe behindan nu læt'; this is obviously untenable, and was, no doubt, due to Thorpe's erroneous reading of the MS., 'hider . . . pe behindan . . . es nu læt.'

161. heannissum, so MS.; Gr. heahnissum.

162. ferh, so MS.; Gr. ferð.

168. worde, so MS.; probably a scribal error for worda, dependent on worn, unless the word must be construed with 'habbe gehyred,' 'I have heard in word,' i.e. 'I have heard spoken.'

187. gehwyrfed, so MS.; Gr. gewyrped.

188. nat-hwylces, so MS.; Gr. nat-hwylces [searo]; purh nat-hwylces may, perhaps, be explained as a confusion of two constructions;—purh nát-hwylcne (the accusative after purh), and nát hwylces, (the gen. after nát; cp. nát he para goda, Beow. 682.)

189. sprece, so MS.; Gr. spræce.

201. heag-engel, so MS.; Gr. heah-engel.

205. tir-fruma[n], MS. tir-fruma.

209. sunu, so MS.; Gr. suna.

228. weoroda, so MS.; Gr. weroda.

229. forp a, so MS.; Th. forpā (i.e. forpam); Gr. furpum.

238. Cp. Prov. viii. 22-31.

243. miltse, MS. milstse.

246. mægon, so MS.; Gr. magon.

256. eowde, d corrected from & in MS.

274. mæra. Th. suggested that the word was due to an error of the scribe, and should properly be maria; there is no evidence for this view, but it is probable that the poet used mæra because of its likeness to maria,—the sort of popular etymology that the old homilists delighted in.

276. para [p]e gewurde, MS. para ege wurde; a letter erased before ege.

280. selesten, so MS.; Gr. selestan.

284. worl[d]cundra, MS. worlcundra.

299. gehealden, this form is either the infinitive (= gehealdan), 'and thou shalt hold thyself immaculate,' dependent on pu sceolde, or it may, perhaps, be better construed as a past part., dependent on pu sceolde (wesan); cp. sceal gewrixled (wesan), l. 1259; in this case pe must be rendered as an accusative of regard, 'as for thee, Mary, thou shalt be held immaculate for aye.'

302. Esaias, an error for Ezekiel; cp. Ezek. xliv. 1-3.

309. Wende swide pæt ænig elda æfre meahte; one would expect ne before meahte, i.e. 'he felt sure that mortal might not,' etc.; the emendation may be unnecessary, if wende pæt = wende hu pæt, wende having almost the force of wundrade.

312. in-hebba, MS. in hebba; Gr. inhebban; the prefix evidently has the force of O. H. G. int, ent, 'to heave up' (O. H. G. intheffen); cp. in-bindan, 'to unbind,' e.g. an sceal in-bindan forstes fetre, 'one shall unbind the fetters of frost,' Gnomic Verses (Exeter Bk.), 75; both forms are hapaxlegomena.

321. stonded, so MS.; Gr. stondad.

333. liopu-cægan, lit. 'a limb-key.'

338. motan, MS. motam.

360. nied, MS. med.

370. we, MS. pe.

395. wear[dia]8, MS. wear8.

398. flihte, so MS.; Gr. flyhte.

409. heannessum, so MS.; Gr. heahnessum.

418. wiht, MS. niht (= uiht = wiht).

422. prim, so MS.; Gr. prym.

PART II.

The poet has made very free use of Gregory's 29th Homily, sects. 9-11, in the second part of his poem. For convenience of reference, the text is printed in the appendix. Cynewulf's true poetical talent loses nothing by comparison with his original.

445. mund-heals, a hapaxlegomenon; (?) = mund-héals, (cp. héals-bóc), 'salus tutelæ,' i.e. 'the safety which comes from the protection (mund) afforded by another'; but cp. mund, l. 92, and the special use of heals in such compounds as heals-mægeð, Gen. 2155; heals-gebedda, Beow. 63; mund-heals may have had a similar meaning, 'beloved maiden.'

455. brega, so MS.; Gr. brego.

493. cwomun, so MS.; Gr. cwomon.

495. weardedun, MS. weardedum.

502. heredun, MS. heredum.

515. stóll, so MS.; Gr. stól.

516-518. I take these lines to be the reply of Galileans; another interesting instance of the dramatic bent of Cynewulf's genius. Grein takes ll. 509-525 as one long speech. The MS. is in favour of my view of the passage, as a new section begins with l. 516.

518. gedryt, so MS.; Gr. gedryht.

526. bifengun, a scribal error for bifangen, due probably to the Northern bifen of the archetype (cp. l. 1156).

536. wopes hring, 'a ring of weeping.' This phrase occurs four times in A. S. poetry, an instance occurring in each of the four poems, Elene, Guthlac, Andreas, and Christ; its peculiar force is somewhat doubtful; Grimm explains it as fletus intensissimus quasi circulatim erumpens; Grein connects hring with hringan, 'sonare'; I render the phrase by 'unbroken weeping,' taking 'hring' in its literal sense of 'ring,' the symbol of continuity.

538. hreder, MS. hreder.

539. beorn, MS. born; bidon, MS. bidan.

547. al-beorhte, MS al-beorhte.

557. bireafod, so MS.; Gr. bereafod.

558. hi, fem. sing. referring to helle (f.).

559. orlege, lit. 'war, strife, hostility,' also 'a place where hostility is shown,' as in this passage; cp. 'Cwædon væt hé on vam beorge byrnan sceolde... gif hé monna dream of vam orlege eft ne wolde sylfa gesecan, Guth. 167; also Guth. 426; 'orlege' in both passages = the place which Guthlac had selected for his dwelling, wresting it from the evil spirits.

563. ne meahtan, MS. ne,ahtan.

585. gehyrdan, so MS.; Gr. gehyrdon.

589. wunat, so MS.; Gr. wunap.

589-596. Note the rhyme and assonance, used to give special point to the passage.

613. yrmöu, so MS.; Gr. yrmöa.

614. [h]is, MS. is.

618. [wæs], evidently omitted by the scribe after sungen.

634. sunu, so MS.; Gr. suna.

653. flyht, MS. flyt.

658-664. This digression on 'the arts and crafts' is a free paraphrase of the lines in Gregory's Homily, (see Appendix II.,) 'dedit vero dona hominibus; quia misso desuper Spiritu, alii sermonem sapientiæ, alii sermonem scientiæ, alii gratiam virtutum, alii gratiam curationum, alii genera linguarum, alii interpretationem tribuit sermonum. Dedit ergo dona hominibus.' In comparing the Anglo-Saxon and Latin two points are noteworthy; in the first place, the amplification of the theme, so as to include secular as well as spiritual gifts; in the second place, the addition of God's motive in not giving all His gifts to any one man; this is not in the original. It is clear that the poet, when he came to the passage in Gregory's Homily, was reminded of a poem, written, in all probability by himself, at an earlier period, preserved in the Exeter MS. and known as 'Manna Cræftas.' A comparison of the lines under discussion and the poem brings out a large number of parallelisms of I am inclined to think that Gregory's Commentary expression. on Job, xxxviii. 4-5, was the original of the poem. Here we have the motive, which is not in the Homily. At the same time I should not be surprised to find a passage in Gregory's works even nearer to the Anglo-Saxon. The original of ll. 682-4 should be words to this effect :-

'Non enim uni dantur omnia, ne in superbiam elatus cadat.'

(Cp. Gregory, Lib. 1, Homilia x. sect. 32, on Ezekiel iii. 13, with marginal note, 'cur divisiones gratiarum sint.')

672. sumum, MS. sum<sup>2</sup>.

677. heanne, so MS.; Gr. heahne.

683. him, MS. hī; Th. Gr. 'MS. hi.'

697. lixed, MS. lixed.

708. feodan, between o and d a letter erased in MS.

709. blæd, MS. blæð.

711. dauipes, so MS.; Gr. dauides.

718. ealle, so MS.; Th. Gr. 'MS. eall.'

723. gebyrda, so MS., either the nom. plural, or a scribal error for gebyrdu.

730. hell-warena; MS. hell-werena; cp. Juliana, 322, hell-warena cyning.

739. gesawan, so MS.; Gr. gesawon.

742. eadgum, so MS.; Th. Gr. 'MS. eadgu.'

756. sellran, MS. sellan.

761. eglum, MS. englum.

765. fær-scyte, MS. fær,scyte.

776. si, MS. s<sup>i</sup>.

783. hleotan, h added by a later hand.

789. dy repran, MS. dyrepran; Th. emended to dy repran.

795. læded, MS. lædað. 803. scæcen, so MS.

799-806. v. 'Excursus on the Runes.'

805. bilocen, so MS., (misprinted bilocan, Gr.)

807. blac rasetteo, MS. blacra setteo; Kemble, blac ræsetteo; Ettm. blác rasetteo; Gr. blac rasetteo; cp. pat fyr meahte réad rásettan, Boethius, Metre 9, (quoted by Grein with wrong reference, 11, 14;) in this latter passage, too, the editors read readra settan; Gr. rightly corrects to read rasettan.

808. recen reada, Th. recen-reada, 'the smoke red'; Gr. recen reada; leg, so MS.; Th. Gr. lig.

810. on tyhte; Th. ontyhte, 'kindled.'

812. gæsta, 'of guests,' so Th.; Gr. gæsta, 'of spirits.'

819. gæst-hofe, so MS.; Gr. gast-hofe.

820. on, so MS.; Gr. in.

826. beheofiað, so MS.; Gr. beofiað; cp. Heora mædenu ne synt behéofode, 'virgines eorum ne sunt lamentatæ,' (Lambeth Psalter, 77, 63).

829. bade, MS. bade.

832. masta, so MS.; Th. Gr. maste.

834. cwaniendra, MS. cwanendra. cerge, so MS.; Ettm. Gr.

cearge.

841. leofra, so MS.; Gr. leofre; the change to the neuter is, perhaps, unnecessary, as the word probably anticipated a masculine noun, par = sum stede hwar. eall, so MS., Gr. eal.

865. heahpu, so MS.; Th. heahpū; Gr. heahoum.

PART III.

The source of the third part of the poem is, undoubtedly, the hymn 'De die Judicii,' (see Appendix III.,) as shown by Professor A. S. Cook, (Modern Language Notes, June 1889.) Special interest attaches to this hymn. It is certainly as old as the seventh century, for Bede refers to it in his work, De Metris. Daniel says of it: 'Juvat carmen fere totum e Scripturâ sacrâ depromptum comparare cum celebratissimo illo extremi judicii præconio, Dies iræ, dies illa, quo majestate et terroribus, non sanctâ simplicitate et fide, superatur.'

873. genægeð, 'assaulteth'; genægan, with accus. of person, and gen. or instr. of thing; cp. 'we pec níða genægað, Guth. 261.

874-876. These lines do not paraphrase any words of the Latin hymn; they were, perhaps, vaguely suggested by the second couplet, 'brevis totus . . . sæculum.'

884. ealle, MS. healle.

894. onhælo gelac, 'the hidden hosts'; Gr. renders onhæle = 'entire'; no other instance occurs of 'onhæle' in the sense of 'whole'; the usual frequent usage is 'secret,' 'hidden'; cp. wid is pes wésten, wræcsetla fela, eardas onhæle earmra gæsta, Guth. 268. Th. renders, 'an unsound assemblage'; Toller, 'the entire hosts.'

907. gebleod, cp. Da wyrta greowon mid menigfealdum blostmum mislice gebleode, 'the plants grew diversely coloured with manifold blossoms,' (the Anglo-Saxon version of the Hexameron of St. Basil, ed. Norman, 10, 36.)

920. pat mag wites to wearnunga (sc. wesan), 'that may be for the soul's warning.'

923. ponne, so MS., not pon as Th.

926. gehwone, MS. gehwore.

933-937; the poet has missed the point of the original:— 'erubescet orbis lunæ sol et obscurabitur.'

959. untweo, so Gr.; MS. untreo, an obvious scribal error, due, perhaps, to the rare use of untweo; no other instance of the word is recorded, but cp. untweofeald, 'untwéofealde tréowa,' (Bœthius, Metre, 11, 95.)

adames, the first and second a in this word, as written in the MS., resemble the rounded Celtic a, and are different from the ordinary letter employed by the scribe.

960. gesargad, MS. gesargað; cp. gesargad, l. 969, where d was originally  $\delta$ , the erased stroke is still visible.

977. pa, MS. pu.

978. scehdun, so MS., probably = scédun, past tense of scéadan, 'to separate'; Gr. suggests scéndun, 'von einem scénan, verwandt mit ahd. scónón, parcere? oder für sceldun = scildun schirmten?'

985. sundes getwæfde, 'bereft of swimming-craft'; Th., Gr., Toller, render sund, 'ocean,' 'cut off from the ocean.' I think the abstract use of the word in the sense of 'natatio' is preferable here; cp. 'he pe æt sunde oferflát,' Beow. 517.

1025. adames, cp. l. 959.

1041. liffruma, MS. liffruman.

1046. wera, so MS.; Th. Gr. read weras, making it subj. of magon; the change seems unnecessary, if bemipan is construed intransitively.

1078. motun, MS. motum.

1087. MS. bydyrned.

1089. The line is evidently defective; Gr. suggests [getéod] weorbed.

1091. wita ne cupun, 'they did not know'; wita = witan; cupun used as auxiliary; Gr. construes wita as gen. plur. of wite, 'punishment'; cp. l. 1212, wita ne cupon, which Gr. treats similarly; the omission of the infinitive n in the phrase is, probably, due to the northern archetype.

1093. man-forwyrhtu, so MS. Th. forwyrhtū (i.e. um).

1099. genomian, so MS.; Gr. gemonian.

1104. Lit. 'They shall see as their bane that which came to them best.'

1126, etc., cp. Appendix IV.; the same passage was paraphrased by Aelfric, (see Homilies, ed. Thorpe, p. 108.)

1129. cwice, so MS.; not cwico, as Th. Gr.

1130. pa hyra; MS. pa pe hyra.

1133. The alliteration is wanting; Gr. reads [hu] in hierusalem, etc.; it is noteworthy that the chief initial letters in the line h, g, c approximate to alliterative effect, (? cp. l. 23.)

1156. bifén, Northern or Mercian form of p.p. of bifén; cp. gedénra, 1264.

1157. bibyrgde, MS. bibyrgede (i.e. bibyrgde), not bibyrgede, as Th., Gr.

1167. frean, MS. fream; Gr. by a curious error has misread Th.'s note 'sream,' and taken it to refer to eah-stream.

1174. rindum, so MS.; Th. Gr. roderum, (a remarkable error.)

1175. magun, MS. magum.

1207. hu, so MS.; Gr. suggests hy.

1212. Cp. note, l. 1091.

1230. wenad, MS. wenead, (i.e. wenad.)

1245. motun, MS. motum.

1249. wlite, so MS.; Th. Gr. slite.

1264. atol, neut. subst., or, perhaps, one should read atol-earfo $\delta a$ .

1269.  $\mathfrak{p}a$ , so MS.; Th. Gr.  $\mathfrak{p}am$  ( $\mathfrak{p}\bar{a}$ ).

1282. ypæst, so MS.; Gr. ypast.

1293. gefean, MS. gefeon.

1300. pon, so MS.; Th. Gr. ponne.

1301. gescomeden, so MS.; Gr. gescomedon.

1306. bigæð, I feel sure that here we have an instance of bigán in the sense of 'to confess,' (cp. M. H. G. bigehan,) though no instance is recorded in Anglo-Saxon lexicons. The more usual usage of the word is 'to commit'; Th. 'when they commit sins'; similarly, Gr. Toller.

1310. unbeted, MS. 8, corrected to d.

1317. lifes tiligan, 'to strive for life'; cp. 'donne he æt hilde sceall wid lad werud lifes tiligan,' (Salomon and Saturn, l. 159).

- 1318. doolian, 'to endure.' I can see nothing against this straightforward way of rendering the word; Grein's view that it is O. H. G. adaljan, M. H. G. edelen, nobilitare, is untenable; the sense of the whole passage has, I think, escaped both Th. and Gr. The rendering of the former is quite meaningless. Gr. takes wille as equivalent to scyle, so that the lines, according to him, imply man's duty 'lifes tiligan syn-rust pwean,' etc.
  - 1319. syn-rust pwean, so. MS.; Gr. prean.
  - 1328. innan, M.S. mnan; magun, MS. magum.
  - 1336. mæðleð, MS. mædleð.
- 1346. hwonne, so MS.; Gr. ponne; the former reading is altogether preferable, hwonne depending on gearo, 'ready for the day when'; leofstum, MS. leoftum.
  - 1349. onfengun, MS. onfengum.
- 1355.  $\alpha$  fndon, MS.  $\alpha$  fdon; the insertion of the n is, perhaps, unnecessary, as n is occasionally lost in consonantal-nan verbs, e.g. nemde, past tense of nemnan; but cp.  $ge\alpha$  fnde, l. 1428.
  - 1369. MS. miccle.
- 1374. ywan, 'to show,' MS. yŏan, 'to flow,' (probably due to an earlier error ypan.)
  - 1380. leope, so MS.; Gr. leodo (for leope).
- 1389. neorxnawang, the etymology of this Old English equivalent of the Latin paradisus has been satisfactorily solved by Mr. Henry Bradley (Acad. No. 911, p. 254); its Gothic representative would be nawi-rohsnē waggs, and its full form in Anglo-Saxon nēo-rohsna wang, 'field of the palaces of the dead.' There is, as yet, no evidence as to whether the word was of pagan or Christian origin; probably the former, being perhaps the Saxon equivalent of the Scandinavian bdainsakr.
  - 1397. fremum, so MS.; not firenum, as Th. Gr.

sealde, MS. salde.

- 1411. [h]ingonge, MS. ingonge.
- 1421. bipeahte mid, so MS.; Gr. bepeahte mec mid.
- 1429. wære pe gelic; MS. wære wege lic.
- 1434. oft and-lata, Th. oft and lata; Gr. 'andlata (?) man erwartet die Bedeutung Backenstreiche oder Beschimpfung'; he punctuates accordingly:—

'and fore monna lufan min prowade heafod hearmslege; hleor gebolade oft and-lata.'...

1445. heanne, MS. heanne; Gr. heahne.

1447. utgotun, so MS.; Gr. ut-guton.

1450. wite, corrected in MS. from wita.

1453. geseoò, Gr. suggests that this word may be from geséon, 'percolare,' comparing biséon, l. 1087, but éac geseon, l. 1456, makes it clear that this view is untenable.

gefremedun, so MS.; Gr. gefremedon.

1486. mec, so MS.; Th. Gr. me.

1487. heardra, Gr. heardre.

1488. swærra, Gr. swærre.

1489. gefæstnad, corrected in the MS. from gefæstnad.

1508. gepegede, I take this word to be the weak past participle of gepicgan, 'to take'; hence 'taken by thirst'; similarly, æpelinga bearn ecgum ofpegde, Gen. 2002; Th. suggests gepregede, 'oppressed'; Gr. derives it from ge-pecgan, 'consumere,' suggesting, too, a possible connection with gepéwan (gepéon), i.e. gepegde = gepewde; Toller follows Grein. It does not seem to have occurred to lexicographers to bring the word in connection with picgan, the past participle of which verb seems to be singularly rare.

THE CYNEWULF RUNES.

CHRIST, 796-806.

THE Runes in this passage stand for the letters Cynwulf, and together form the name of the author. A similar artifice is found in three other poems-'Elene,' 'Juliana,' and 'The Fates of the Apostles.' 'Christ' and 'Juliana' are both in the Exeter Codex; 'Elene' and 'The Fates of the Apostles' in the Vercelli Codex; the latter poem consists of little more than 100 lines; it is certainly no very meritorious piece of work, and it seems strange that the poet should have been so anxious to attest his authorship thereof by a long Runic passage. In the MS. the poem immediately follows the 'Legend of Andreas,' and I am more and more inclined to regard it as a mere epilogue to this more ambitious epic, standing in exactly the same relationship therefore to it that the tenth passus of 'Elene' does to the whole poem. Its relationship is, perhaps, even closer, for, whereas the ninth passus of 'Elene' ends with 'finit,' there is no such indication of the ending of the poem in the case of 'Andreas.' At the present moment I can see nothing that militates against this view of the Cynewulfian authorship of this latter poem, and further investigation will enable us, I think, to claim that Cynewulf inserted his name in his four most important works—the epics on 'Christ,' 'Elene,' 'Juliana,' and 'Andreas.' covery of the runic passage at the end of 'The Fates of the Apostles' was made by Professor Napier some three years ago, and a transcript of the half-obliterated text was published by him in the Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum, vol. XXXIII. The four runic passages may be divided into two divisions; the first, in which the Runes stand merely for the letters of the poet's name; the second, in which the Runes discharge a two-fold function. representing not merely the letters of the poet's name, but also the words that the letters suggest, the names of the letters or homonyms. To the first class belongs the passage in 'Juliana'; to the second, the other three passages. The interpretation of the Runes in these latter passages is one of difficulty; in the first place, the lines in which they occur are by their very nature intended to puzzle the reader or the hearer, being almost riddles; in the second, several of the Runes bore different names at different periods, and we have not as much information on the subject as we need. Our chief sources of knowledge are the Runic alphabets, which, in many cases, have the names of the letters assigned throughout, and in some cases an interpretation of these names, and the 'Rune Poem,' printed by Hickes from a MS. now lost; in this poem each Rune is followed by its name, together with a short poetical interpretation of its meaning. explanation of a Rune in any one of these passages should, I think, hold good when applied to the corresponding Rune in the other passages. For convenience of reference I print the four passages, substituting Roman letters for the Runes, and numbering each line.

1. C-Rune; the name of the rune in all the Runic alphabets is cén, i.e. 'a torch,' literally 'a pine'; the word is rare in A. S.; its sole use seems to have been as the runic-name; no other instance is recorded. In passage A, B, C, the poet is evidently using the rune to suggest to his hearers the adjective  $c\acute{e}n(e)$ , i.e. 'keen,' 'bold,' 'active.' In passage B the temptation is strong to regard C-drusende as equivalent to 'a drooping torch,' but in order to obtain this meaning, it is necessary to emend the MS., changing sæcc, 'discontent,' into secg, 'man'; moreover drusian is specially used in the sense of 'to become inactive' (by reason of old age); cp. Phœnix, 368, he drusende deap ne bisorgao. Cene drusende, i.e. 'the ageing warrior,' is, to my mind, the subject of the whole passage, and is added as explanatory of the words á was sacc oð ðat. I much doubt whether the words conveyed any other meaning to Cynewulf's hearers. I differ, too, from previous commentators in constructing peah in direct connection with the first half-line, regarding cnyssed . . . drusende as a parenthesis.

Napier, swa; Sievers, bonne (?).

The C-Rune in passage C is, as will be seen below, capable of similar interpretation.

2. Y-Rune. Its name in the A. S. alphabets is  $\dot{y}r$ ; in the 'Rune Poem'  $\dot{y}r$  is described in words that lead one to render it as 'a bow':—

'yr bib æbelinga and eorla gehwæs wyn and wyrbmynd, byb on wicge fæger, fæstlic on færelde fyrdgeatewa sum.'

Yet, in spite of the Rune poem, ŷr cannot have meant 'a bow' in A. S.; ŷr is the old Norse equivalent of the A. S. ¿ow, 'yew,' which latter word is actually the name of another rune in the Rune-Poem; it is therefore a fair inference that the interpretation of the Y-Rune as a 'bow' in this one place is due to Scandinavian influence on the writer of the passage in question, seeing also that in the Scandinavian Runic alphabet the letter bears the same name ŷr, constantly glossed 'arcus'; probably the whole idea of the Rune-Poem was suggested by similar Scandinavian poems, and the writer did not recognise that the Norse ŷr, in the sense of 'bow,' was identical with the A. S. ¿ow, 'yew-tree'; as a modern poet has it:—

'Dark down the windy vale I grow,
The father of the fateful Bow,' 1

In my opinion, no ordinary Anglo-Saxon would have been able to give any meaning at all to jr as the name of the Y-rune, and if told by a scholar that it meant 'a bow,' he would have failed to see any reason for the name; the shape of the rune in A. S. n certainly does not suggest 'a bow,' though the name applies excellently to the Scandinavian n. The Y-Rune must have been a fairly late creation in A. S., and its symbol is rightly nothing but a modification of the U-Rune, n; similarly the name of the rune, i.e. jr, is, I take it, merely due to the umlauted form of the name of the U-Rune, i.e. ur; the rune and its name probably passed from England to Scandinavia, and there it was naturally interpreted to mean jr, 'a bow.'

How then is the rune to be interpreted, as used by Cynewulf?

In passage A, it seemingly might stand for  $yrm\delta o$ , 'misery'; and this view has been held by most scholars—Thorpe, Kemble, Grein; several points might be urged against the interpretation, and however plausible the suggestion seems, it is, I now think, quite untenable. Apart from other tests, the interpretation will not hold good for passage B. Grimm, Grein, Zupitza, etc., construe the rune in this latter passage as 'bow'; Leo suggests that it is equivalent to the A. S. rune ea, and eear, i.e. 'earth,' 'the grave,' here = 'verfall der kräfte'; Reiger would substitute the rune ea, and read  $ea\delta il$  (=A. S.  $e\delta el$ ); similarly in passage A he would substitute Northumbrian eadil =A. S. veall, 'mendicitas.'

In passage C, the words represented by the C-Rune and Y-Rune, which are co-ordinated, must evidently be the same part of speech; if  $C = c\acute{e}ne$ , 'the bold warrior,' in the same sense as in the other passages, one would expect Y to stand for an adjective or substantive, in any case of masculine gender; but in passage A the Y-Rune is co-ordinated with the N-Rune; concerning the meaning of this latter rune there is no doubt; it represents the abstract noun nýd, 'necessity'; therefore the Y-Rune in this latter passage must, I think, stand for some similar abstract noun. Judging by A and C, the Y-Rune represents a y-word that can discharge the two-fold functions of a masculine adjective (or noun) and of an abstract noun. The only Anglo-Saxon word that satisfies these requirements is yfel=(1) wretched; (2) affliction; and there is, I venture to think, strong reasons for favouring this interpretation of the Y-Rune in the three passages. In passage A, yfel and  $n\dot{y}d =$  'affliction and distress'; in passage B, yfel gnornode nydgefera = 'afflicted, mourned the companion of sorrow'; in passage C, cene and yfel='the bold warrior and the afflicted wretch.'

May not the name yfel have been suggested by the name of the W-Rune, i.e. wynn, 'joy,' being a sort of antithesis to it? The letter y would probably at first have followed w immediately in Runic alphabets arranged in the order of the Roman letters, before a special symbol was found for the double letter x. In Scandinavian alphabets no separate sign occurs for this latter sound, which is represented by the runes for hs.

3. N-Rune. The interpretation of this rune is simple. As regards passage A,  $N = n\acute{y}d =$  'necessity, hardship,' Y and N being the subject of meahtan. As regards B, the authorities vary on the question of the continuation of  $n\acute{y}d$  and gefera; Grimm reads N gefera nearu sorge dreah; Ettmüller, N gefera, nearusorge dreah; Kemble, N gefere, nearu sorge dreah; Grein, Zupitza, etc., nydgefera, etc. The point of the expression nydgefera is, I think, that it serves the purpose of a double entendre; the poet uses it not merely to express its literal meaning 'the companion of sorrow;' 'yfel' (i.e. the Y-Rune) may well be described as nyd-gefera, i.e. 'the companion of the N-Rune' in the poet's name, (cp. gefera as a technical word in Ælfric's Grammar, wordes gefera = an adverb.)

A similar double entendre occurs, I think, in the next line; enge rune = (1) nearu-sorge, 'a constraining sorrow'; (2) a description of the N-Rune, 'the narrow rune,' +; in 'Cynewulf' this 'narrow rune' comes between two especially wide ones; hence, perhaps, the special point of the words.

In C, 'N lige's' is the excellent reading suggested by Sievers; the letters are obliterated in the MS.

4. E-Rune. In A and C this rune does not occur, and it would seem that the poet styled himself in these passages 'Cynwulf,' and not 'Cynewulf' (on the philological aspect of the form 'Cynwulf,' see Sievers' remarks, Anglia xiii.). Thorpe noted concerning A that the absence of the rune E, and the want of connection in the sense, proved the loss of a couplet between wrapra wita and bipse; Grein similarly suggested the insertion of a line containing an E-Rune,

'hwæt him æfter dædum deman wille [on þam E-fullan dæge engla dryhten] wraþra wita,' interpreting 'E. full' = eh-full, = egefull, 'terribilis,' (usually E = eh, 'equus'). But the passage makes perfect sense without any interpolation, and the discovery of passage C corroborates this view; the space between nearowe and [cy]ninges peodom would not suffice for more than the words containing the N-Rune, as Sievers has pointed out in the article referred to above. Professor Napier was originally of opinion that the obliterated passage might have contained the E-Rune as well as the N-Rune.<sup>1</sup>

In A, wrapra wita is, of course, the partitive genitive after hwat; the subject of wille is clear in both A and D; the identity of expression in the two passages is remarkable.

The E-Rune in B = eh, 'horse'; the word fore that follows the rune has been variously interpreted—(1) as an adverb formerly; (2) as a preposition governing him; (3) = fore, 'on the journey.' I prefer (2) 'before him'; the poet, I take it, was filled with grief when he watched the hunt, but could not join in it; otherwise the passage must mean, 'where once he had joined in the delights of the hunt, he now wandered sorrow-laden.'

5. W-Rune. The proper name of this rune = wyn, i.e. 'joy'; this name of the letter is given in the Salzburg Runic Alphabet, and an interesting piece of additional evidence exists, in the fact that jubilitate is glossed  $\triangleright$  sumia $\triangleright$ , i.e. wynsumia $\triangleright$  in the Ninety-ninth Psalm of the Oxford Interlinear Version, MS. Junius 27, (as pointed out by Professor Logeman;) uuinne is also the name of the Gothic letter in the Salzburg MS. A dialectical variety of wyn = wenn, which was probably identified with wén, i.e. 'hope'; hence the latter interpretation of the name of the rune. In the Runic poem the lines on W run as follows:—

'w (wen) ne bruce, 'de can weana lyt, sares and sorge,' etc.

If the rune is interpreted as  $w\acute{e}n = 'hope'$  in this passage, it is impossible to understand the lines; but wen ne = wenne = wynne, genitive of wyn, after bruce. Similarly in the Rhyme Poem, 1. 76:—

<sup>1</sup> I may as well point out that I had printed the lines in Christ without the interpretation of the E-Rune, interpreting it as it stands in my text, before the discovery of the Fata Apost. fragment; I had noted, too, the value of the discovery as corroboration of the form 'Cynwulf,' before the appearance of Sievers' notable article; the same is true of my interpretation of the W-Rune as wyn (not wen, as previous editors).

'bonne lichoma liged · lima wyrm friteb ac him wen ne gewiged,' etc.

there, too, wen ne = wenne = wynne.

In passage A, B, C, the rune is clearly to be interpreted wynn; Grein renders it  $w\acute{e}n$  in A, wen = wynn in B, Napier interpreted the rune in C as  $w\acute{e}n$ , Sievers as wynn (see Anglia xiii.). The letters of the alphabet in Anglo-Saxon are masculine; hence se W., although wynn is feminine.

U-Rune. The name of the rune in the Runic Alphabets =  $\dot{u}r$ , interpreted to mean 'a bull,' cp. Runic Poem, l. 4:—

U (ur) bib anmod and ofer-hyrned, 'the bull is fierce with horns above his head.'

The rune in A, B, and C, has baffled the ingenuity of commentators. As regards A, Kemble, Thorpe, and Grein, take the letter to represent ur, formerly; but the adverb does not occur in Anglo-Saxon; its equivalent, or, is used only as a prefix; and although at first sight it seems that some adverb must be understood in this place, the objections against úr are insurmountable; I had thought it possible that perhaps iu, 'formerly,' might have stood, but I retract this view now. As regards the rune in B, Grimm takes it merely as the letter U, and makes it represent the whole name of the poet-'Cynewulf war ehemals die wonne der jugend'; Kemble, 'U (I was of old) a gleam of youth'; Leo, úr=6r, 'sonst war gold der jugendzeit wonneglanz'; Grein interprets B in the same way as A, 'olim'; Zupitza, úr= 'auerochse'; the scholars that interpret the rune as equivalent to úr, 'bull,' take it to mean 'property' in general, comparing the use of feoh, but there is absolutely no evidence in favour of this view, and Sievers' interpretation of Uon edle in C, 'das gut im erbsitze,' seems to me untenable. The only Anglo-Saxon word that will satisfy the three passages seems to be the possessive pronoun úr, 'our'; Dr. Cosijn (in 'Verslagen en mededeelingen der koninklijke Akademie van Wetenschappen, Afdeeling Letterkunde,' pp. 54-64) suggested the possibility of this interpretation, noting that úr is a frequent form of the pronoun in the Vespasian Psalter; but more important evidence in favour of the view exists in the fact that in a Runic Alphabet (Domitian,

A, 9) the rune is actually glossed 'noster.' It is strange that this point has not been noticed; it confirms the probability. The alphabet in question is printed in Hicke's, p. 136. Finally, therefore,  $A = \acute{u}r$  . . . lifwynna dæl;  $B = \acute{u}r$  . . . geogoðhades glæm; C=úr wynn on eole. In A 'longe'='long ago'; cp. Ex. 557, 'wile nu gelæstan, pæt he lange gehet.' I take it that the words in A refer to the Deluge. With the phrase wynn on eole in C, cp. Rune Poem. 1. 38-eoh byb . . . wyn on eble.

7, 8. L and F call for no special comment; the name of the former, lagu, and of the latter, feoh, fit the passages in which they occur.

In the following rendering of the passages in question I have attempted to bring out the peculiar force of the original. A, B, C, the Runic letters (i.e. their Roman equivalents) CYNE WULF stand respectively for the following words:—Cén(e), yfel, nyd, eh, wynn, úr, lagu, féoh; their English equivalents are printed in italics.
